MOWIN'—
(By Hal Cochran.)

Ya have to keep mowin', 'cause grass keeps on growin'. Old nature has made it that way. 'Twas only last week that it looked pretty sleek, but it needs a new cuttin' today.
You get out the mower to trim it down lower. You work in the sun and the shade. The pushing you're doing is constantly brewing a song in the grass cuttin' blades.
The mower's quite trusty but often gets rusty. You halt, while the oil's spread around. Again you are at it; you strongly combat it—the grass that has grown on the ground.
In winter, I reckon, it's summer you becomin' forgettin' there's mowin' in store. But, now you have reason to wish for the season when you will be mowin' no more.
And yet, Mister Cutter, allow me to say that mowin' is really just y. Just try and not mind it. I'll bet that you'll find it relief from the work of the day.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—
Eggs Won't Crumble.

To slice hard boiled eggs perfectly without crumbling use a knife dipped in boiling water and wiped dry.

This Saves Sugar.
A pinch of soda added to stewed rhubarb when nearly done will lessen considerably the amount of sugar needed to sweeten it.

Removes Tar Stains.
Any fabric that has been stained by tar can be restored by sponging with chloroform or turpentine followed by benzene.

"Peeling" New Potatoes.
The thin delicate skins of new potatoes may be removed quickly and without waste by rubbing with a rough cloth, keeping both cloth and vegetable very wet.

One to One.
One egg will thicken one cup of milk for custard.

Menus for a Family

Tested by C. SISTER MARY.

BY SISTER MARY.

WHAT TO SERVE AT WEDDINGS.
The wedding breakfast is usually served at 12:30 o'clock, following the ceremony at "high noon," but often, for convenience regarding trains, an earlier or later hour must be chosen. The menu may be as simple as desired, containing only three courses but the service should be as formal and perfect as possible. A wedding breakfast is nothing more nor less than a formal luncheon as far as the menu is concerned, but the table decorations and the unusual radiance of silver, glassware, linen and china proclaim the affair to be of the greatest importance.

The following menu is moderately elaborate and is planned for a wedding numbering only as many guests as can be seated at tables:
Tomato and Anchovy Canape
Chicken and Sweetbread Timbales with Mushroom Sauce
Twice Baked Potatoes

Creamed Peas
Parker House Rolls
Jellied Cucumber Salad

Cheese Straws
Strawberry Parfait in Meringue
Shells

Wedding Cake
Salted Nuts
Colored Bon Bons

The bon bons should carry out the color scheme used for the wedding. The salad course may be omitted. In this event radish "roses" and "extra fine" olives should be served with the second course.

If preferred a fruit cup can take the place of the canape, but the canape is not quite as ordinary as the cup.

Tomato and Anchovy Canape.

Cut slightly stale bread in slices about 3/4 inch thick. Cut in rounds the size of tomatoes to be used. Pare and chill tomatoes and cut in slices almost as thick as the bread. Toast bread quickly and lightly and spread lightly with butter. Spread with anchovy paste, cover with slice of tomato and sprinkle with enough grated cheese to cover the tomato completely. Add a dash of paprika and put under the broiler long enough to melt the cheese without browning it. Drop a tiny sprig of crisp parsley on each canape and serve at once on a lace paper doily on a small plate.

Chicken and Sweetbread Timbales.

Two cups minced uncooked chicken breast, 1 sweetbread, 4 eggs, 2 cups whipping cream, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper.

The chicken is not cooked, but the sweetbread is, of course, parboiled and blanched. They should both be minced very finely. Each egg is beaten separately before adding. Combine chicken and sweetbread and add 1 well beaten egg. Beat well and add the second beaten egg. Beat well and add each egg until all are used. Beat in salt and pepper and fold in cream whipped until firm. Turn into buttered timbale and place on several thicknesses of cloth in a pan containing about 1 inch of hot water. Cover with heavy buttered paper and bake twenty-five minutes in a moderately hot oven. Unmold and serve with mushroom sauce.

This recipe will make twelve timbales. Two cups of mushroom sauce will be needed.

The Bride's Cake.

Any delicate cake can be used for the bride's cake and a rich fruit cake is always suitable for the "grooms" cake.

When the number of guests at a wedding is too large to permit the use of tables a buffet service is most convenient.

Here again the menu may be simple or elaborate but the service must be perfect and without a "hitch." Although all the food is placed on the buffet at once, the dishes must be replenished and always kept inviting and attractive in appearance. If possible replace the first dishes with second fresh dishes and rearrange and replenish the first ones in the kitchen.

The following menu is what a caterer calls a "stock" menu and is suitable for any hour of the day or night and any sort of a function:

Chicken à la King (Chafing Dish)
Fruit Salad in Cheese Cases
Assorted Sandwiches
Bon Bons
Molded Ices
Fancy Small Cakes
Coffee

The cheese cases are made exactly like cream puff cases except that the sugar is omitted and grated cheese, salt and pepper added.

Birthday Mrs. Wm. Gynn Celebrated

Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gynn, about two miles north of Grand Detour, a happy birthday surprise was held for Mrs. William Gynn, their sister-in-law. Mrs. William Gynn resides some little distance from the Thomas Gynns and drove to see them Sunday morning and invited them to dinner. While she was at the Thomas Gynn home chatting the twenty-four guests arrived, completely surprising the lady. A delicious picnic dinner was served and much enjoyed. Mrs. Thos. Gynn baked a most inviting white birthday cake with pink candles in pink rose-holders, and this on a dainty blue standard made a dainty and appropriate centerpiece. A happy day was spent by everyone and Mrs. Gynn, guest of honor, received many good wishes from her friends for happy returns of the day.

An Account of Paul Byers Wedding

Paul W. Byers, eldest son of former Representative and Mrs. John H. Byers of this city, was united in marriage to Miss Kathryn Duff of Flora, Ill., June 1, at Salinas, Calif. Mr. Byers is well known in Dixon, having lived here nearly all of his life. He graduated from the South Side High school with the class of 1914. After attending the University of Illinois for one year, and serving two years and four months in the World War, he left Dixon for Idaho, where he lived for several years, doing road work; later he went to Los Angeles where he is now employed as Junior Engineer for the Highway Commission of the county of Los Angeles. He is another Dixon young man who has made good. During the wedding ceremony Mr. Byers was attended by Warren Graft, of Dixon, and a classmate of the groom. Miss Duff was a special instructor for a year or more at the Dixon State Hospital. The young people met when Mr. Byers was visiting his parents here a year ago. Mr. and Mrs. Byers are living at 342 West 55th St., Los Angeles. The bridegroom is a fine, manly young man whose hosts of friends here expected best wishes at this time.

The following account of the wedding was taken from the Daily Index of Salinas, Calif., June 1, 1925:

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Moore's apartments at the Inlay House was the scene of a simple wedding this morning at 11:50 when Miss Kathryn Duff of Flora, Ill., became the bride of Paul Byers of Los Angeles, Rev. J. A. Tancock officiating.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Moore, as matron of honor, and Miss Marguerite Hayward as flower girl. Master Homer Hayward was the ring bearer. The groom was attended by Warren Graft of Los Angeles. S. B. Moore gave the bride away.

The pre-nuptial dinner was held last evening at Pebble Beach Lodge. Following the wedding a luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Homer Hayward. The young couple left immediately after the luncheon for Los Angeles where they will make their home.

Those present at the wedding from out-of-town were Mrs. D. C. Hagle and Miss Gale H. Hagle of South Pasadena.

Attended Graduation Exercises at Ashton

Attorney and Mrs. Grover Gehant, and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Booth attended the graduation exercises at the Ashton schools on last Friday evening. Mrs. Gehant, formerly Miss Lohr, is a graduate of the Ashton schools, and Mr. Booth is a graduate of fifty years ago. Thus it was an occasion of double interest and enjoyment. In the class of fifty years ago there were three graduates, Lyman Booth, now of Dixon, Mrs. Bessie Rosecrans, deceased, and Mrs. Maggie Byers of Ashton.

There were splendid exercises Friday evening and a banquet. One of the most interesting features of the entire evening was the paper read by Mr. Booth, reminiscent of the class of 1875 and dedicated to Mrs. Bessie Rosecrans, deceased members of the class.

Reservations Should Be Made at Once

Twenty or more girls have been listed for the Girl Scout Camp and others desiring to go should make reservations at once as the number is now limited. Anyone desiring to assist the three Girl Scouts who may not be able to go unless receiving assistance, may call Mrs. W. A. Rhodes or any member of the Scout Council. One "good fellow" called Mrs. Rhodes on the phone after the notice in last evening's paper appeared and donated the money necessary to send one girl to camp, and when asked his name refused to give it. That is being what we call a "real good fellow." The good he has done will come back to him a thousand fold.

DANCING PARTY WAS GREATLY ENJOYED—

The first of a series of summer dancing parties given by the Dixon lodge of Elks drew a crowd to the Twin City pavilion last evening. There were large representations present from Clinton, Sterling, Polo, Oregon and Rochelle, who spent a most delightful evening and thoroughly enjoyed the music furnished by the orchestra.

Meeting of D. A. R. Held Yesterday

The Daughters of the American Revolution held a most delightful meeting Monday afternoon, June 15, at the beautiful home of Mrs. William Nixon on East Third street.

A royal welcome was given the chapter, numbering thirty and three visitors by Mrs. Nixon and two daughters. The chapter always celebrates Flag day, and this year they inaugurated a feature, which they hope to carry on each year, calling it a birthday party. It is the birthday of the flag, also the birthday of the chapter which occurs in May. As this was the twenty-seventh anniversary each daughter deposited in the treasury a penny for each year.

The meeting was called to order by the regent, Mrs. Burnham, with the usual introductory exercises. The members grouped upon the spacious porch with its magnificent view over the hills and woods from the bluffs of our own Rock river.

The roll was called with responses by the members of interesting items and stories which about our beautiful flag. A small amount of routine business was quickly disposed of, and a short program, consisting of two charming piano numbers by Elizabeth Rhodes and a delightful reading by Mrs. Burnham, a humorous rendering in southern dialect, the experiences of a Mountain White woman at a city hotel.

After the program, the retiring regent, Mrs. A. G. Burnham, made a touching farewell speech, handing over the gavel, she has used with so much fairness and discretion to her successor, Mrs. W. A. Rhodes.

After this came, a most enjoyable walk about the lovely grounds and gardens, enjoying the flowers and the fine view, in all directions was most truly appreciated.

Returning to the home, elaborate refreshments were served by the several committees of the past year. After much pleasant chat the last meeting before the summer vacation, came to a close. "At the end of a perfect day."

CHRISTIAN CHURCH NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hall, 521 E. McKenney St., will entertain the officers and teachers of the Bible school Tuesday evening, in the monthly Workers' Conference. Wednesday the Ladies' Aid Society has accepted an invitation to spend the day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Brooks southwest of town; cars leave the church at ten thirty.

The Y. P. S. C. E. will have their postponed ice cream, cake and strawberry social on the church lawn, next Saturday evening. Mrs. Reagan's entertainment at Grand Detour, also prevented last week by weather conditions, will be given Tuesday evening of this week.

New York, June 16—(AP)—William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation, has increased his life insurance to $6,500,000 from $3,000,000, says the Spectator, an insurance publication.

The new policy, which is underwritten by 16 companies, makes Fox the second largest insurance risk in the world. The largest known policy holder is Rodman Wanamaker, with insurance aggregating $7,500,000.

Five million dollars of the Fox policy is payable to his corporation and the rest to his estate.

QUEEN OF SCOTS ACQUITTED.

Ainsworth Mitchell, document expert of the British home office, has recently completed an exhaustive investigation of several years' duration of all the original records and documents relating to Mary, queen of Scots. And now he has announced that she was not guilty of the treasonable acts with which she was charged and for which she was executed. The letters ascribed to her, plotting against the life of Queen Elizabeth, he declares are in the handwriting of her treacherous secretary, William Maitland of Lethington.

Since Mary Stuart was beheaded nearly 340 years ago, one is moved to ask the expert what he is going to do about it in the light of his recent conclusions. Historians, biographers and romance writers have gotten along very well with the fascinating Mary as a subject. It seems at least unnecessary to revive the old question of her possible political mischief-making and ambitions at this late date and to inject cold facts or alleged facts, into a story that has long been rich with romance and poetry.

ROAD HOGS.

This seems to be the time of the year when the road hog flourishes the most plentifully.

The road hog, you know, is the motorist who wants the whole pavement. He like to drive slowly in the middle of the street, so that anyone behind him has to stay behind, even if it is at a snail's pace.

He also plows ahead regardless at crossings and intersections, and he always makes the other chap take the ditch on a narrow country road.

Since the road hog is too selfish to consider others, the only remedy would seem to be to ram with an armored car. He ought not to be allowed to drive at all.

WHAT IS IT?

Before you get into another argument on evolution, on either size, be sure you know what you are talking about.

The number of people who hold decided opinions one way or another on that subject without really knowing anything about it is amazing.

Every public library has plenty of clear, simple books on the subject. Since the popular conception of the proposition is usually a good many miles off, a little real study of the subject, just to precede the arguments, wouldn't hurt anyone.

Citizens' training camps are getting more popular year by year. Five thousand four hundred and eighty youths have applied in the sixth corps area for admission to the two camps in the area, Camp Custer in Michigan, and Jefferson Barracks, Missouri. There is room for only 120 more boys, and Chicago claims that 80 of these should be from Chicago. That leaves but few for the remainder of the territory, and prospect is that applications will go over the whole quota before the camps open July 23. It is up to Lee county boys who want the benefit of this training to hurry up filing their applications if they have not already filed them.

Illinois is to participate in the sesqui-centennial in Philadelphia next year. At any rate, the senate has passed the $275,000 appropriation for that purpose. It looks like a lot of money, but many Illinois people will "see the show," and they will not be ashamed if the appropriation bill becomes a law. Philadelphia staged one of the first of the big world's fairs in 1876, and this one, fifty years later, will present many contrasts showing how great half a century's progress has been.

Publication in France of letters between Klotz, former finance minister over there, and Carter Glass, secretary of the United States senate under President Wilson in 1918, indicates an effort over there to muddy the waters in the matter of funding France's debt to this country, by showing that the Wilson administration policy was to base French settlement with the United States on reparations that might be obtained by France from Germany. But Briand and other French financiers are not disposed to discount the debt in this way.

Now it is proposed to roof the baseball park at Dayton, Tenn., to provide a large enough place in which to admit people to the trial of Scopes, high school teacher indicted for teaching evolution. Inasmuch as it is not yet proposed to charge an admission fee, perhaps this is all an attempt on the part of Tennessee to attract tourists. But it must not be a glass roof over that ball park to shut out the Tennessee sun in July.

Opinion of the great central west was concisely voiced at the recent meeting in Michigan City of the tidewater congress. It was at the meeting of the council of states that it was resolved "that this association confines its efforts to the St. Lawrence project, neither opposing nor favoring any other project or policy, and that the west will accept no substitute for the open road to the sea by the St. Lawrence."

BY CHESTER H. ROWELL

Death follows shockingly soon after the culmination of many American careers. Nearly the whole intimate circle of both the Wilson and the Harding administrations is now gone, almost before we had realized that the administrations were history.

Vice President Marshall is the last. And he was a man who, in spite of his modest self-deprecation, will be missed.

A peculiarly modest man, he made no pretense of greatness, had no delusions of grandeur, but kept his head, his loyalty and his democracy in high place, and fitted into a difficult situation with singular tactfulness.

Marshall was a characteristically paradoxical product of Indiana. This superficially prosaic state has had a peculiar fecundity in producing poets. Marshall was not exactly that, but he was an epigrammatist, with the faculty of turning out homely and quotable sayings.

Even when he sometimes said the wrong thing, he did it so generally that nobody held it against him.

KNOWLEDGE STILL WILL BE AVAILABLE

One more thing the decision of the supreme court in the Oregon school case will protect us against.

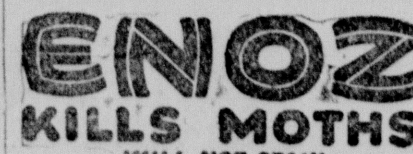

If the Tennessee munia spreads, to forbid in public schools and colleges the teaching of anything that Bryan does not know, these states will at least not have authority to compel everybody to attend those Bryanized institutions.

Modern knowledge may still be taught at private expense, even if prohibited at public cost.

THE REAL PROBLEM FOR THE "WETS"

Senator William H. King of Utah, chief of the "wets" in the original fight against the Eighteenth Amendment, and still a pronounced opponent of prohibition, gives to his fellow-wets the same warning repeatedly expressed in these columns, that legally most of the things they are agitating for are permanently impossible.

The amendment, he points out, can not be changed except by a vote with everybody knows is impossible, and while the amendment stands, no alteration of the Volstead Act to permit

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

No. 14—THE GIANT AND THE CAULDRON

For three nights on top of the fog bank stood a huge giant in the sky

"I told you a story about 'The Twins.' That story showed that it is Pot of Gold," said Mi O' Mi to the well to believe in many things that we do not see.

"Now, I am going to tell you a story which shows that we cannot—or should not—believe in all the things that we do see.

"For instance once upon a time a man was sent to prison for life because his pipe was found in a house where there had been a robbery. And once I knew a boy who was kept back at examination time he was caught copying. He wasn't copying at all, but watching a fly on his neighbor's desk, which had fallen into the inkwell."

"Is this a fairy story?" asked Nancy, who would rather have listened to one fairy tale than a dozen of any other kind.

"Sort off!" nodded Mi O' Mi. "At least it is about a giant."

So he began:

"Once upon a time in a country where the high mountains seem to rise right out of the sea there lived a peasant and his wife and two children.

"Their cottage was on a cliff above the sea and to find pasture for their sheep, the peasant had to climb a steep mountain path with them every morning to a place where it was level and covered with green grass.

"At night he had to bring them down again, for even in the mildest weather it grew very cold in the mountains, after sun-down. After the shearing there was danger of them freezing and it would not do to leave them unprotected.

"One night a heavy mist arose from anything actually intoxicating is constitutional.

So Senator King advises the wets to concentrate on "2.75 per cent beer and wine," which he thinks would pass the courts, and to work for this, not as an entering wedge toward something more, but as the final goal.

This, remember is the advice, not of a "dry" but of the very chief of the "wets."

One is tempted to ask, first, why the "and wine"? There is no such thing as 2.75 per cent wine.

The "and wine," in that phrase means exactly as much as "and main" in "might and main," or "stock" in "stock and stone."

"Beer and wine" means "beer."

But, anyhow, it is well to get the legal point clarified, on authority that the wets will accept. Then the practical question remains.

How many chemists would it take to see that the "2.75 beer" was really 1.75? And wherein would the places where that beer was sold differ from saloons?

If the legal fog is cleared out of the way, this is what is left.

the sea, that looked like a solid gray wall.

"The sun was just about setting as the peasant approached the level pasture land at the top of the mountain.

"As he reached the top he stopped to look at the heavy fog below him. Suddenly he started back. For there right on top of the fog bank stood a huge giant in the sky. He stood with his arm on a long staff, as though gazing out over the world.

"The peasant did not look for his sheep, but rushed frightened down the mountain path to his cottage where he was met by his wife, wringing her hands in despair.

"The children are lost!" she cried. "I was down at the beach scouring out the big copper cauldron with sand. I left for a few minutes, and when I went back they were gone. I have searched everywhere."

"The giant has stolen them!" cried the peasant, telling his own tale of what he had seen on the mountain.

"You see," said Mi O' Mi, "how they jumped at a conclusion without waiting to find out the truth."

"But had he?" asked Nick.

"Certainly not," said Mi O' Mi.

"There was no giant at all. What the peasant had seen was his own huge shadow reflected on the sky. Others had seen it, too! It sometimes happens when the sun is in a certain position and there is a fog."

"But the children!" said Nancy.

"The copper cauldron was so big that the children had crawled inside!" said Mi O' Mi.

"The tide came up to a little island not twenty yards away—there they were, safe and sound. It doesn't do to guess at things, you see."

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRES. COTE TO RUTH BURKE

Ruth Dear: Instead of going into all the details and paralyzing my right hand, I am sending the enclosed clipping from the Pittsburgh News, which will give you a good idea of what happened at our house on Wednesday night.

It was a terrible experience.

Why do you know one of the men put his arm around Jack's neck so he could hardly breathe? I was upstairs with the babies and the suspense was something awful.

I'll give you the story here from where the newspaper left off.

Ruth, I learned something very thoroughly and that is the fallacy of the old saying, that there is honor among thieves. When a man gets into a tight place where his life and liberty is concerned, he is going to get out of it just as quickly and easily as possible, and in the case of thieves, he has no scruples in regard to the other fellow.

It seems that the man who planned the entire thing got away that night

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

BY AHRENS

and Commissioner Laidlaw and two or three detectives took the other four back to the Central Station, where they cross-examined them until almost morning. Finally one of the men who was in the automobile—for they were questioned separately—was promised leniency and confessed.

Of course, the first question asked of him was where Zoe and Syd were. From him they found out that Syd had been left in an old barn on an abandoned farm about twenty miles out. Zoe was held captive in an upper room of a ramshackle warehouse down by the river, his warehouse had been turned into a boot-legging joint below and it was here that the entire band met to plan their raids and divide their hauls.

They found poor Zoe in a terrible condition. She is here in my home now while I am writing, with two trained nurses, but even opiates seem to have no effect for every little while I hear a wail ending in a scream of terror. Her body is covered with bruises. Oh, Ruth, it is too awful for words. One moment she will be calling for the babies and the next one screaming, "No, no, no, no, no."

She did not even recognize me when I went into the room, for she said, "Tell Mrs. Prescott how good she is. Make her understand that I went straight this time."

Then her voice trailed off into this terrible, "No."

Evidently those fiends tortured her to find out something. Jack seems to think that they believed we kept a large sum of money in the house, for as you know they were frightened away the first night and then came back for something.

Jack came when they brought Zoe to the house about an hour and a half ago and started immediately with the police after Syd. As yet he has not returned. I do hope nothing has happened to him. Detective stories are wonderful to read, Ruth, but it is terrible to live them.

ATHLETICS WON
BY SCORING 13
RUNS IN INNINGGreat Rally Staged by Mackmen; Pirates
Win Again

New York, June 16.—(AP)—Connie Mack's Athletics have increased their lead in the American League race by one of the greatest up-hill battles ever staged in the majors.

Eleven runs behind yesterday, they scored 13 runs and defeated Cleveland 17-15. Simmons' homer with two on base polished off the batting attack in the eighth and accounted for the winning runs. Six pitchers were used by the Mack men and three by their opponents. As Washington was idle yesterday without a scheduled game, Philadelphia became a game ahead of its nearest competitor.

The Red Sox easily defeated the White Sox 13-5 in the only other American League contest, Flagstead and Boone aiding the Boston triumph with circuit drives.

Giant Rally Felled
A ninth inning rally by the Giants fell one run short and the Pirates won their third straight victory from the National League champions, 7-6. Eddie Farrell, recruited from the University of Pennsylvania, made his first start at third base for New York, but had to leave the game in the fifth inning when spiked in the right arm, by Moore. Grantham of the Corsairs hurled his bat at Pitcher Scott after being hit by a pitched ball and was banished from the field.

Cincinnati resumed its winning stride at the expense of the Robins, who lost, 5-2. The victory places the Reds within half a game of Brooklyn now in third place. It is reported that the Robins have offered two players and $50,000 for Pitcher Jimmy Ring of the Phillies, without response.

The Cubs annexed their fifth straight by downing the Braves, 8-4, Chicago registering four home runs and Boston one. Brooks drove out two four baggers, while Gabby Hartnett poled out his 15th of the season. At St. Louis, the Phillies took their ninth consecutive defeat as the Cardinals won, 6-4.

SAILING BY STEERAGE

(Copyright by R. H. Doubleday)

Cattle, the great mainstay of commerce, will be given a prominent place on the national stage of sportsmanship, when the pick of the range will meet human opponents in the Chicago Roundup and world's championship rodeo, which will be staged in the Chicago stadium beginning August 15. Chicago business interests, through the Association of Commerce, have made possible the enactment of this drama of the Far West. "Outlaw" bronchos are difficult to ride, but some of the most daring buckaroos, leaping from corral post to a steer's broad back, have found him the more difficult of the two to master.

When the "covered wagons" creaked westward, bringing the pioneers who built in the Middle West the backbone of a great nation, tied behind each was the one unfailing source of sustenance—the cow. In front, faithfully hauling the temporary home of the adventurer, were the offspring of the creature at the tailgate. Since then the world's greatest mercantile and industrial empire has been built around the commercial strength of the livestock that has come down from these humble forebears. And in the Chicago stadium they'll find their place in the sun.

Cleveland—The Strangler Lewis-Mike Romano wrestling match was postponed because of rain.

New York—Jimmy Goodrich, Buffalo, and Stanislaus Loayza of Chile, will meet July 3, for the lightweight boxing championship, as a result of elimination bouts.

"Gabby" Hartnett of the Cubs and Ken Williams of the Browns are trailing Hornsby of the Cardinals and Meusel of the Yankees, who have 17 and 16 respectively in home run swats.

Shortstop Kibbie, former University of Texas star, who has recently joined the Braves, is a little fellow but his fielding is spectacular and his hitting timely. He covers considerable ground and looks like a fixture on the infield.

They say when Manager Collins is hitting, all the White Sox hit. This was certainly true yesterday.

The Athletics established a 1925 major league record for scoring in one inning when they tallied 13 times in the eighth inning.

Barney Friberg of the Cubs has been claimed via the waiver route by the Phillies.

Jim McAuley, Los Angeles shortstop, who came to the Cubs when Maranville was injured this spring, many of him, anyway—is sick of it, and now he's making up his mind to get rid of a lot of restraints that otherwise perhaps he'd have submitted to. That's the politicians' diagnosis, at all events.

Lately the tendency away from restrictive laws has been hastened by a few developments which made them ridiculous. The prolonged failure of prohibition to prohibit was weighing heavily already.

Then came the coast guard's violent burst of activity against rum smuggling, exciting, at the same time, considerable indignation over the prodigious expense involved, and a vast amount of mirth at the entire absence of any result that liquor consumers are able to discern.

The stampeo from Detroit to Windsor, Ontario, on the resumption of beer-selling there, caused a laugh. Recent gestures by the anti-tobaccoists caused another.

The attempt in the Florida legislature to outlaw the word "clapper" caused a third. Tennessee's anti-evolution case is helping liberalism notably.

Friends of the rejected child labor amendment to the constitution lay their defeat to anti-regulation feeling. That undue restriction of parents, in the upbringing of their children, was the amendment's purpose is denied, but that it was so interpreted is obvious, it's admitted.

The proposition's supporters also made what they concede now was the mistake of maintaining that society's rights over the child are superior to the parents'.

"An attempt to carry state dictation right into the home" was the popular verdict. Forthwith the amendment was turned down overwhelmingly.

Leading dries read the signs of the times clearly. Fully aware of the threat that "anti-ism" is going to be turned into a joke by those who seek to overthrow it, General Counsel Wayne B. Wheeler of the Anti-Saloon League emphatically repudiates any antipathies but the league's own.

It is, he says, anti-nothing except the saloon. Secretary Lewis Pickett of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals is on record as knowing of "no body outside a lunatic asylum who favors tobacco prohibition."

If the politicians guess right, there's likely to be a decided loosening of regulative strings when Congress and the various state legislatures meet next.

Few of the politicians themselves are enthusiastic regulators. They passed the laws they thought the voters wanted and will repeal them as readily if they think the voters want that.

Prohibition, to be sure, won't be so easy to handle. The eighteenth amendment probably can't be wiped from the constitution for a long time.

But the Volstead law can be changed and the amendment considerably modified by legal definition. The dries think the supreme court would call this unconstitutional but the wets doubt it.

Anyway, they point out, the law's repeal would leave the amendment ineffective and there's no question concerning Congress' right to repeal it.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Not only is there danger of communicable diseases from the bite of mosquitoes, but there is quite a bit of unpleasantness connected with the process.

Mosquitoes breed in dead, still water. Often this water is in empty tin cans in the back yard, a rain barrel, or the tile on the roof of the house.

Tin cans should have holes punctured in their bottoms before they are thrown away so they will not hold water.

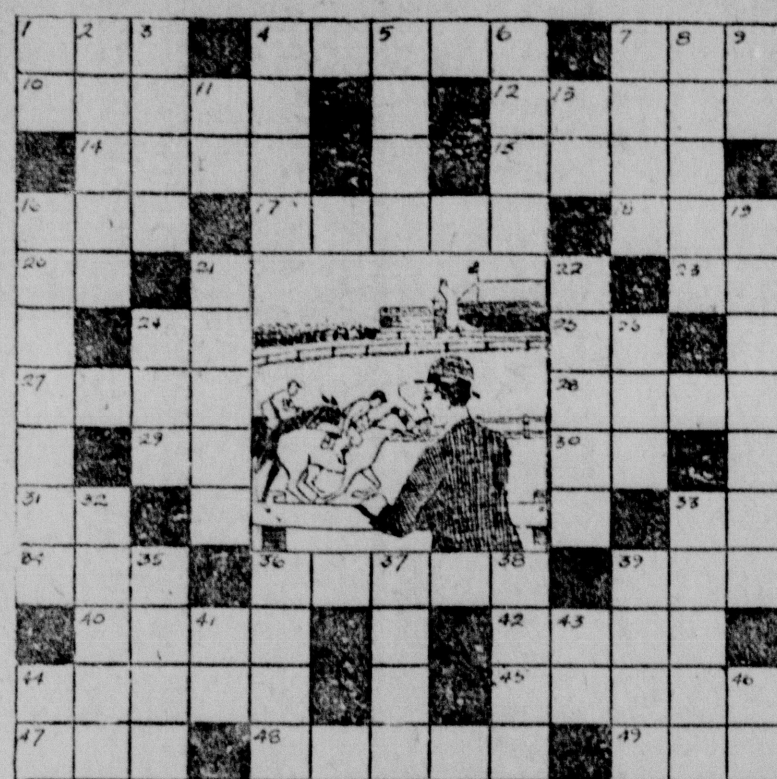

Gutters, spouting and tile roofing should be examined for stagnant water.

Mosquitoes do not travel far from their breeding places. However, they are driven by the winds, and are carried on persons sometimes for quite a distance.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burton © 1925 NEA SERVICE INC.

THE STORY SO FAR:

GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, marries DICK GREGORY, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes . . . but no work or children.

She refuses pointblank to do her own housework, and hires a maid. But Dick has to let the maid go, because he can't afford her wages. Gloria has swamped him with her debts.

She becomes infatuated with STANLEY WAYBURN, an actor. When he leaves town to go to New York, Gloria follows him. But he spurns her. Then she tries to get a job as a chorus girl, and fails. She begins to realize how lonely she is for Dick.

When she comes home to him, he takes her back, but not as his wife. Gloria wonders if he is not in love with his secretary, MISS BRIGGS. Dick stays out late one night. Gloria is sure that he is with Miss Briggs, but the next day she learns that he spent the night at the home of DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, who had killed himself because of his wife's love affair with JIM CARREWE.

The breach between Gloria and Dick widens. Gloria tries to do a good job of housekeeping and fails. At last she makes up her mind to leave Dick. The morning she decides to go, May Seymour comes to see her. She shows Gloria a clipping from a newspaper, and bursts into tears.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

GLORIA unfolded the little clipping, curiously.

"Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Millbrook announce the engagement of their daughter, Margot, to Mr. James Neale Carewe, formerly of Boston. The wedding will be an event of late October," it read.

"Jim Carewe engaged?" Gloria cried aloud. "Why, did you ever hear of such a thing! And who's the girl, for goodness sake?"

May looked up at her with wet, red-rimmed eyes. "She's a little cousin of myra's," she said. "A young thing just graduated from school this month. She can't be more than twenty . . . and Jim's thirty-six, if he's a minute! Talk about cradle robbing. . ."

Gloria shook her head slowly. "But May," she said, "You never heard a snap of your fingers about Jim. I've heard you say so a hundred times. It was always Jim who was wild about you."

"I know it," May answered. "But Jim's like all men. He wants to be respectable. He'd never marry me in a million years since this . . . this scandal about John's . . . suicide."

She pressed her handkerchief hard against her lips for a moment. Then she went on bravely: "This girl can give Jim just what he wants. Respectability, a houseful of friends, youth . . . everything clean and new and shining. Perhaps he still does care for me, but he's not going to marry a scandal! He's too selfish to do a thing like that! He thinks too much of himself."

She took off her black hat and tossed it down on the hall table. "You haven't any coffee on the stove, have you?" she asked. "I haven't had any breakfast. I haven't had any, either," Gloria answered. "Come out into the kitchen. I won't promise to cook anything for you. But Dick left some coffee on the stove, and there's jelly and rolls."

SHE glooped and looked hard at May for a minute. "Well," she said, "I guess we're both out of luck, my dear. I'm leaving Dick this morning. We've agreed to disagree. And I'm going back home to my people."

"They stood there looking at each other with empty eyes. Neither had a word to say. It flashed through Gloria's mind that they were like moths dancing around a light. They had flown too close to danger and had had their wings singed and broken. . ."

But Stanley Wayburn and Jim Carewe were safe enough! One married, the other engaged to be married! They had escaped. Men all ways did. It was the woman who took all the slurs, the snubs, and the pain. The man went scot-free from one love affair to another. . .

"Gloria," May said suddenly. "Let's get out of this town! Let's go away where nobody knows us, and start over again. . ."

But Gloria shook her head. "No," she said. "I tried that once. . . The time I went to New York. And I almost died from homesickness. I . . . I wanted Dick."

May stared at her. "Well, you poor little fish, why are you leaving him, then?" she asked. "If you care anything about him?"

"It's Dick who wants me to go," Gloria answered. "He . . . he's through with me." "Oh, you're crazy," May answered. "You might tell that to some people and get away with it! But I know Dick Gregory. . . and he's in love with you, and always has been!"

AFTER May had gone, Gloria thought over what she had said. Was it possible that Dick still loved her? . . . No, May was wrong. Dick couldn't love her any more, or he wouldn't let her go this way, would he?

All morning as she made the beds and washed the dishes, Gloria listened tensely for the phone to ring. . . There was just a bare chance, that Dick would call her from the office to ask her not to go away from him. . .

But no, Susan Briggs was at the office. And Dick was completely under her sway. He was probably not even thinking about his wife at home. His wife, packing her trunks to leave his house, for ever!

Hadn't Dick said that Miss Briggs was the one person in the world who gave him sympathy and understanding? A man didn't talk that way about a woman unless he was in love with her, Gloria told herself dejectedly.

She locked her trunks, and presently the expressman came for them. There was nothing more to do. . . No excuse for staying. And still Gloria lingered in the house that had been the House of Dreams for her and Dick. . .

House of Dreams? . . . Heart-break House was more like it! Gloria laid the key to the front door down on the hall table, where Dick would be sure to find it. She picked up her little handbag, and went out. The door closed behind her. It closed on a chapter of her life. . .

THE Sunday after Gloria's return to her father's house, Aunt Dorcas came to dinner. She brought Uncle Henry along with her. . . a small, silent man. He had been married to Aunt Dorcas for twenty-four years. And he showed it.

"I told you that Gloria had left her husband, didn't I, Henry?" Aunt Dorcas asked between bites of roast beef and Yorkshire pudding. Uncle Henry made a tired sound in his throat. "And a very good thing it was, too," Aunt Dorcas went on. "A very good thing!"

Gloria raised her eyes to her aunt's large, florid face. "Why is it a good thing for a woman to leave her husband?" she asked. "That's not what I said," Aunt Dorcas answered, sharply. "But in your case it was. When a girl . . . a poor girl . . . marries the son of rich parents, and they treat her as the Gregorys treated you, the best thing she can do is to clear out!"

Gloria looked down at her plate. "They've been very nice to me . . . both Father and Mother Gregory," she said. "They gave us the money for our honeymoon, you know. And Mother Gregory gave us the family silver for a wedding present."

Aunt Dorcas raised one hand like a traffic policeman. "Aah!" she cried, "but that was for your soul! . . . What did they ever do for you? . . . Did old Mrs. Gregory ever give a party to introduce you to all their high-and-mighty friends? Not she! She left you right out in the cold, as far as I can see!"

Aunt Dorcas folded her hands on her magnificent chest, and looked around, daring anyone to deny what she had said. No one did. The meal came to an end at last.

Gloria followed her father and Uncle Henry out on to the front porch, leaving her mother and aunt to clear away the dishes. There were times when she couldn't stand Aunt Dorcas in large doses. . . Today was one of them. . .

SHE sat down on the front steps, and looked through the Sunday paper. Suddenly the photograph of a house in the advertising section caught her eye. It looked like their house. . . Dick's and hers. It was their house!

"Owner must sell," read the cutting beneath the picture. "Six room house, with finished attic. Everything in good condition. Good terms if buyer takes furniture. Call Mr. Gregory, Ebbett Building."

So Dick was going to sell the furniture, too! Everything that had been theirs. . . the friendly yellow lamp in the living room, the cunning white kitchen table, the gold-colored Chinese rug that had lain like sun light on the floor of the dining room. . .

"I suppose he'll sell even the little red smoking stand I gave him for Christmas," Gloria thought miserably. "And my little tea-wagon!"

The little tea-wagon had been the pride of Gloria's heart. It had looked so homey with its blue tea cups, and the little silver teapot that had been Dick's grandmother's. "I think I'll telephone Dick and ask him for that little tea-wagon," she made up her mind that night, as she lay in bed.

But when the morning came she did not telephone. She decided to go to Dick's office to ask him for the tea-wagon. She didn't know why, but she wanted to see him! She wanted terribly to see him again. . .

SHE spent two hours bathing herself, brushing her hair, making herself lovely for Dick's eyes. Her beauty was her only weapon against Miss Briggs. She must keep it bright and shining! "Thank goodness, I'm still young!" she thought. "Years younger than Miss Briggs, who must be at least thirty."

"After a while I shall be thirty, and call myself twenty-nine," Gloria said to herself. "But I'll bet I won't look like Sue Briggs! So long as there's a grain of powder or an inch of lipstick left in the world, I'll have it, by jinks!"

Her heart was light as she hurried down the street to the street car line. She hummed happily, as women do when they are going to meet the man they love. . . But did she love Dick? She didn't know. She knew only that in a few minutes she would be seeing him again. That was enough. . .

She had hardly stepped from the street car when she did see him. He was not ten feet away from her, walking along the pavement. And beside him, looking up into his eyes, was Susan Briggs!

nation produced $2,368,910 worth of fluorspar last year and $2,277,210 worth of it came from probably within ten miles of this spot. Geologists are searching these hills. Burrows are going in here and there. The "spar" mines are turning out lead and zinc as byproducts and the ore holds some silver. Iron ore lies thick. They say that there are whole hills of it—waiting transportation.

Fluorspar, the main product, is used as a base for "spar" varnishes, for fluting in the steel mills, for putting the high finish on vitreous ware and highly glazed tiles. It is found along the faults in these hills, torn and twisted by upheavals dating back to early geological ages.

Apparently it was deposited in molten or gaseous form, or perhaps, in solution. It fills caverns and fissures and somewhat resembles rock candy. It is found in crystal form and in many colors, blues, purples, reddish or pink, almost black, cream and white. It crumbles easily, splits, forms cubes, diamond-shaped, or angular bits.

Some is marketed in pebble form where it retains its gaily of colors. Some, used in the manufacture of hydrofluoric acid and for other purposes, is finely ground and looks like flour. Three big mines are running in the hills, at Rosiclare. A dozen others, small ones, are scattered through the back-country.

Lead was dug out here seventy-five years ago. For a time the fluorspar was thrown aside as no one knew its value. Now men go down 700 feet below the surface of the earth to get the "spar" which sells for about $20 a ton. Fluoresces lack in the hills tell of the day when iron was mined. They are ivy-grown now.

Natives say that lack of transportation killed the iron industry, that "mountains" of the ore stand "out yonder" and that some day "she'll come back."

E'town and Cave-in-Rock are the "Old South" transplanted over into Illinois. The settlers were from Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. They still prefer, mostly, "soft cistern water" to drink. The negroes are of the old days, the sunbonneted mammy and "uncle," unspoiled.

"They want that concrete road in E'town. It will cost much money to the state because of the cuts and fills dynamiting. I asked a native when it would be done."

"In about a year," he said, and then, with a smile, "What's a year in E'town?"

So they're getting ready, leisurely. They are wondering what the wide road will mean. How many cars will come in? How much new money it will bring? In the dim memory of the older men Hardin county was a beaute of industry.

The river trade, one time a great potato center, later producing much wheat, all sold down the river. Once farmers making fence rails out of black walnut logs! Finally the land was worked out. The soil, thinned. The river traffic all but died.

Hardin county is beating back now. It is turning to dairying, to poultry raising, to orcharding. All these industries do well. But the curse of the "thin days" is still on the land. Much of it can be bought for fifteen dollars an acre, some for ten.

"Fifteen dollars an acre today. Perhaps thirty or forty tomorrow," said E. F. Wall, the E'town banker, as we rode through the hills together. "Where in all America can you find investment possibilities like that?"

We were coming back from Cave-in-Rock. We had gone into the cavern which legend says was the lurking place of bands of outlaws who used to dart out on the river and murder and rob the boatmen. We had gone up the river to Ford's Ferry.

Near here the government is putting in "Dam No. 50, from Pittsburg county down," in its effort to bring back river traffic. The dam will cost millions and the workmen say "The job'll take eight more years to finish."

Three other similar dams are going in below E'town, near Golconda, Brookport and Cairo.

"Old Ford," the natives say. "Used to tip off the Cave-in-Rock river pirates and get a cut on their loot."

He's gone, years ago, and all his descendants. But some families persist here. We rode in a gasoline-driven river-boat, delivering people and freight up and down the Ohio. It is called the Mary McConnell.

"Grandfather and father carried on the business before me," observed Richard McConnell, whose weathered face beamed from above the wheel as he steered "er safely around the bars."

"James McFarlan was my great-grandfather and Elizabeth my great-grandmother," observed Mr. Wall, whose vaults protect the county seat money.

Jake Gaines came into these parts many years ago. His first job was rowing traveling salesmen down the river from Shawneetown to Paducah, stopping en route. That was a seventy-mile pull. When he started he rented a skiff at 25 cents a day. When he died he had a good river business, now in the hands of his sons and they say that he was worth $35,000. One day an old hill farmer came in with a roll of $7,000 and deposited it in the bank.

"Jes' been accumulat' it," he explained. "Dug it up last night. Never got around to bring it before."

I'm writing this in Jim Watson's office. He's a lawyer. Served many terms in Springfield. Knows the country. Has traveled everywhere. He says, "E'town's all right, I like it. Was born just across the street from where I live. Seems like, though that the young folks who go away to the universities have a hard time coming back. There's my boy, for instance—he's studying law."

The concrete road—

That's E'town's rainbow's end right now. Not far away less than a year likely, and what's a year in E'town? An old hillman, hickory shirt and overalls, sagely observes, "Guess they're buildin' it so's to get their likker out easier." You wonder how much of a humorist he is for they do whisper of moonshine back in the hills.

We sit under trees, in the moonlight, the Ohio below, cool breezes, frogs singing, far from railroad and city, and a traveling men observes:

"I can see a great pleasure resort here. Thousands of motor cars, music, song, young people dancing, a pretty spot as any place on earth—cliffs, bluffs, caves, the river, hunting, fishing. E'town, which has slept a hundred years, is waking."

A second concrete road is planned across Hardin county, from the north to Cave-in-Rock. Here it will meet the federalized road on the Kentucky side—so the Illinois road system and Kentucky's will meet, opening up a hitherto almost impenetrable district. E'town, Rosiclare, Cave-in-Rock and Hardin county will tell their story at the Illinois Products Exposition, Chicago next October. I'm leaving here now to travel on "Re-Discovering Illinois." I wish it were flat. Quail scuttles to right and left as we diver. I wish, too, for those promised concrete roads.

These mountain trails "as is" are hell.

(This is the eighth of a series of articles entitled "Re-Discovering Illinois." The next will be published soon.)

Why we call them TRUE Low Pressure Balloons

THE comfort and cushioning you get out of balloon tires depends on how soft you can run them with safety to the tire.

Even two or three pounds make a big difference.

It is therefore important for you as a car owner to know that U. S. Royal Balloons need not be over-inflated to save them from early and uneven tread wear or tread separation.

U. S. Royal Balloons are built of Latex-treated Web Cord. They have the new U. S. "Low-Pressure Tread."

This construction provides long tire service at even lower pressures than have been recommended in the past.

True low pressure means extra cushioning, added comfort and less wear and tear on your car.

Don't compromise to save your tires. Ride on U. S. Royal True Low Pressure Balloons.

RE-DISCOVERING ILLINOIS

By LESTER B. CROSBY

Illinois Chamber of Commerce

E'town is looking forward to a new day. You'll not find E'town on the map. The word is Hardin county code for Elizabethtown. It lies on the bank of the Ohio river midway between Cave-in-Rock and Rosiclare in the extreme southeastern part of Illinois.

I am writing this in E'town, sometimes more briefly just E't. Yes, they're getting ready for a new day down here. Grade is just being completed for the first concrete roadway which the state will build in, thirty miles long, winding, dipping, twisting, up and down like a velvet coaster, through the "gap" from Harrisburg. This road means that Hardin county, that Rosiclare, E'town and Cave-in-Rock will cease to be hermit. In these villages is romance, the past. A part of the hotel I slept in last night was built in 1818 by James McFarlan. Outside in the hotel yard, under my window almost stand a little group of tombstones. On one, a simple slab, brief tribute:

To the Memory of JAMES MCFARLAN Born March 29th, 1776 Died Dec. 1st, 1837

Legend says that his good wife, Elizabeth, for whom the little city was named, sleeps at his side. But if there ever was a marker for her, it is gone. So passed glory.

Camp Yomechas Daily News Echo

Instead of campfire all of the fellows congregated in the big tent last night in the dark, and after a sing and the evening paper, Mr. Harper of Dixon gave an exceedingly interesting talk on his years of experience in the far north. The fellows all wanted him back again.

Kickapoo won again this morning, this time from the Blackfeet, 15-11. The Crows also won from the Wyandottes in a game with few runs. The score was 11-13.

Monday the Crows will play the Blackfeet at number two, and the Wyandottes will meet the Kickapoo at number one.

Tomorrow, while it will be a day of bliss as far as cats are concerned, will be a day of agony in many other respects. This means the Big Chiefs will be constrained to have and dig out clean shirts. Mr. Hunt will have his hands full directing flocks of casually curious visitors; Kuhn will not be able to relax all day, what with endless diners to be stewed away and many, many fair ones to be entertained, and everybody in general will have to toe the mark pretty close.

Kenaga and Eichler both made trips to the telephone this morning with the avowed intention of calling up their lady friends. Distance has probably lent enchantment and they could resist no longer.

Kuhn is terribly worried about the hazelbrush on his "phiz" for he sees the inevitable approaching—he will have to shave for Sunday. He spent several long periods before the glass today and finally got out his scissors.

Such as the barber does on your hair before applying the clippers. Watch Kuhn tomorrow.

A solo and quartet were features of last night's progress in the dark. Kenaga gave a great number and the quartet did fine. They are practicing up on some more numbers.

Several privileged onlookers saw a charming sight late this afternoon. Mr. Sanford Junior was hanging in his swing by the cook shack, and on the blanket beneath was Santa Claus.

Harms having an enjoyable time with the youngster's rattle.

Harry Herbst still continues to come across with his all night harangue about nothing in the Big tent much to the wrath of would be sleepers.

Last night our reporter says his subject was, Why come to camp and have no fun? The only thing he didn't receive was applause. The aim of everything else was pretty good.

Bugs of all brands infested the big tent last night. A quart of that-fly oil Mr. Harper spoke about would have come in right handy.

Bill Johnson has little time left in the routine of the day after reading his morning mail and inditing filtering answers to the many members of his large correspondence list.

Wilbur Harms did the monkey act this afternoon, climbing up the top of the big tent to lasso the pole. He is now booking dates for advance engagements along this line. Prices are reasonable.

Peter Pan, alias E. L. Kuhn, is giving nightly concert and serenades at headquarters tent. These concerts are excellent for those who appreciate classical music in the highest and most advanced forms and there are no charges. The time is about 7:15. Come early and get a good seat at these artistic programs. Mr. Kuhn is a musician of the first water.

"I must say," said he, "that I think it would be a mighty poor thing to go back to London before I know a great deal more of this place than I do at present."

"I could never dare to walk into the back office of my paper and face old McArdle," said I. (You will excuse the frankness of this report, will you not, sir?) "He'd never forgive me for leaving such an unexhausted copy behind me. Besides, so far as I can see, it is not worth discussing, since we can't get down, even if we wanted."

"Our young friend makes up for any obvious mental lacunae by the measure of primitive common sense," remarked Challenger. The interests of his deplorable condition are immaterial to us; as he observed, we cannot get down in any case, so it is a waste of energy to discuss it."

"It is a waste of energy to do anything else," growled Summerlee from behind his pipe. "Let me remind you that we came here on a perfectly definite mission."

"I am perfectly definite," said Challenger, "in my mission. I am here to test the truth of Professor Challenger's statements. Those statements, as I am bound to admit, we are now in a position to endorse. Our ostensible work is therefore done. As to the detail which remains to be worked out upon this plateau it is so enormous that only a large expedition, with a very special equipment, could hope to cope with it. Should we attempt to do so ourselves, the only possible result must be that we shall never return with the important contribution to science which we have already gained. Professor Challenger has devised means for getting us on to this plateau when it appeared to be inaccessible; I think that we should now call upon him to use the same ingenuity in getting us back to the world from which we came."

"I confess that as Summerlee stated his view it struck me as altogether reasonable. Even Challenger was affected by the consideration that his enemies would never stand confuted if the confirmation of his statements should never reach those who had doubted them."

"The problem of the descent is at first sight a formidable one," said he, "and yet I cannot doubt that the intellect can solve it. I longer, bunching up the red apples of his cheeks, "is capable of acrobatic exertions which would be impossible to a man of a more solid, though possibly of a more commanding appearance. I applaud his resolution."

"By George, young fellow, you've put your hand on it!" said Lord John, clapping me on the back. "How we never came to think of it before I can't imagine! There's not more than an hour of daylight left, but if you take your notebook you may be able to get some rough sketch of the place. It we put these three ammunition cases under the branch, I will soon hoist you on to it."

He stood on the boxes while I faced the trunk, and was gently raising me when Challenger sprang forward and gave me such a thrust with his huge hand that he fairly shot me into the tree. With both arms clapping the branch, I scrambled hard with my feet until I had worked, first my body, and then my knees, on to it. There were three excellent off-shoots, like the huge rungs of a ladder, above my head, and a tangle of convenient branches beyond, so that I clambered upwards with such speed that I soon lost sight of the ground and had nothing but foliage beneath me. Now and then I encountered a check, and once I had to shin up a creeper for eight or ten feet, but I made excellent progress, and the booming of Challenger's voice seemed to be a great distance beneath me. The tree was, however, enormous, and, looking upwards, I could see no thinning of the leaves above my head. There was some thick, bushy clump which seemed to be a parasite upon a branch upon which I was swarming. I leaned my head round it in order to see what was beyond, and I nearly fell out of the tree in my surprise and horror at what I saw.

A face was gazing into mine—at the distance of only a foot or two. The creature that owned it had been crouching behind the parasite, and had looked round at the same instant that I did. It was a human face—or at least it was far more human than any monkey's that I have ever seen. It was long, whitish, and blotched with pimples, the nose flattened, and the lower jaw projecting, with a bristle of coarse whiskers round the chin. The eyes, which were under thick and heavy brows, were bestial and ferocious, and as it opened its mouth to snarl what sounded like a curse at me I observed that it had curved, sharp canine teeth. For an instant I read hatred and menace in the evil eyes. Then, quick as a flash, came an expression of overpowering fear. There was a crash of broken boughs as it dived wildly down into the tangle of green. I caught a glimpse of a hairy body like that of a reddish pig, and then it was gone amid a swirl of leaves and branches.

"What's the matter?" shouted Rexton from below. "Anything wrong with you?"

"Did you see it?" I cried, with my arms round the branch and all my nerves tingling.

"We heard a row, as if your foot had slipped. What was it?"

I was so shocked at the sudden and strange appearance of this ape-man that I hesitated whether I should not climb down again and tell my experience to my companions. But I was already so far up the great tree that it seemed a humiliation to return without having carried out my mission.

After a long pause, therefore, to recover my breath and my courage, I continued my ascent. Once I put my weight upon a rotten branch and swung for a few seconds by my hands, but in the main it was all easy climbing. Gradually the leaves thinned around me, and I was aware, from the wind upon my face, that I had topped all the trees of the forest. I was determined, however, not to look about me before I had reached the very highest point, so I scrambled on until I had got so far that the topmost branch was bending beneath my weight. There I settled into a convenient fork, and, balancing myself securely, I found myself looking down at a most wonderful panorama of this strange country in which we found ourselves.

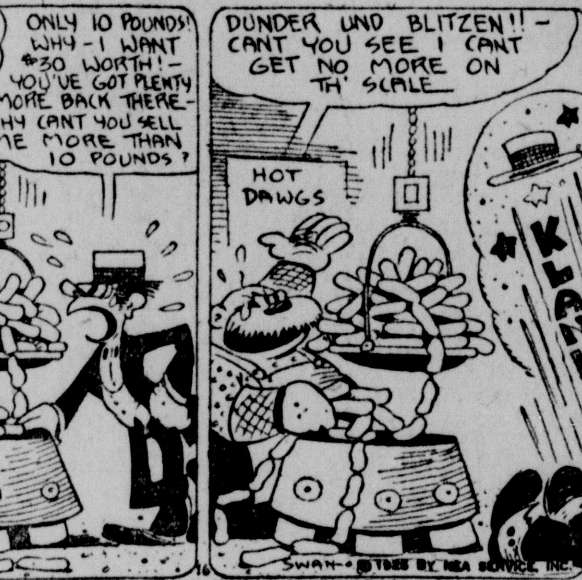

"Our young friend," said Chal-

am prepared to agree with our colleague that a protracted stay in Maple White Land is at present inadvisable, and that the question of our return will soon have to be faced. I absolutely refuse to leave, however, until we have made at least a superficial examination of this country, and are able to take back with us something in the nature of a chart."

Professor Summerlee gave a smart of impatience.

"We have spent two long days in exploration," said he, "and we are no wiser as to the actual geography of the place than when we started. It is clear that it is all thickly wooded, and it would take months to penetrate it and to learn the relations of one part to another. If there were some central peak it would be different, but it all slopes downward, so far as we can see. The farther we go the less likely it is that we will get any general view."

It was at that moment that I had my inspiration. My eyes chanced to light upon the enormous gnarled trunk of the ginkgo tree which cast its huge branches over us. Surely, if its bole exceeded that of all others, its height must do the same. If the rim of the plateau was indeed the highest point, then why should this mighty tree not prove to be a watchtower which commanded the whole country? Now, ever since I ran wild as a lad in Ireland I have been a bold and skilled tree-climber. My comrades might be masters on the rocks, but I knew that I would be supreme among its branches. Could I only get my legs on to the lowest of the giant off-shoots, then it would be strange indeed if I could not make my way to the top. My comrades were delighted at my idea.

"Our young friend," said Chal-

New York—This is to be a brief in defense of the ape. I trust that it will come to the attention of Mr. Bryan, Mr. Darrow and others engaged in the monkey controversy at Dayton, Tenn.

Having just returned from Coney Island I am firm in the belief that it is high time that humans cease maligning apes by claiming common ancestry with them.

First let us establish the mise en scene. It is blistering hot. Cellars wilt. Hat hands stick to the head. The murky air is made heavier with the frying grease of potato chips and waffles mingling with whiffs of cheap perfumes and sachet and that particular zoological atmosphere that hovers over a mass of the great unwashed.

Here there is a mulatto waving a bejeweled hand before the face of a white girl, claiming to have hypnotic power over her while onlookers stand with mouths agape.

There a dowager of indeterminate age and doubtful origin being pointed to as a "beautiful muscle dancer" who will give her performance inside the tent.

In a "fun house" two pigmies slapping women with cracking boards and shocking men with an electric rod, secure in the knowledge that their size protects them from retaliation, having their one grand fling at superiority over their physical superiors.

A gallery of funny mirrors, fat persons laughing at thin reflections of themselves and thin persons laughing at fat reflections of themselves. Soda-water cowboys paying a dime to whip horses into a wild gallop around a 200-foot track, taking the corners so sharply that the steeds can hardly keep their feet. Finally one of them crashes into a fence and is knocked silly, while the horse, brainer than his rider, escapes unhurt.

Walking down the midway and on the boardwalk, men, women and children slobbering over dripping ears of corn, tossing the cobs under the feet of others? Pigs eat in one corner of their sty and keep their food out of their wallows.

And now into an exhibition of freaks. Kookoo, the bird lady with her hair shaved off to accentuate the odd shape of her head. Her visitors look upon her with commiseration. And the armless lady who writes with her toes and the Indian who swallows fire without feeling it and the immense fat woman, they all are objects of pity of those who are giving full play to their superiority complexes.

And as we go out there sits a little monkey in a cage in silent and solemn wonder at the queer creatures who poke queer things into the cage despite the sign that reads, "Don't Feed the Monkeys."

He acts with great decorum. Infinite wisdom lies in his eyes and yet he is perplexed with those who parade past him. Some of them should be in and he should be out.

Never mind, little monkey. In the cage. You, at least, are protected. I bow to you. And if, perchance, you and I are in some manner related, I am proud.

THE STORY SO FAR:

GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, marries DICK GREGORY, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes . . . but no work or children.

She refuses to do her own housework, and hires a maid. But Dick has to let the maid go. Gloria has swamped him with debts for her clothes and a new car.

She becomes infatuated with STANLEY WAYBURN, an actor. When he leaves town to go to New York, Gloria follows him. But he spurns her. Then she tries to get a job as a chorus girl, and fails. She begins to realize how homesick she is, how lonely for Dick.

When she comes home to him, he takes her back, but not as his wife. Gloria wonders if he is not in love with his secretary, MISS BRIGGS. Dick stays out late one night. Gloria is sure he is spending the evening with Miss Briggs. But next day she learns he was at the home of DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, who had killed himself because of his wife's love affair with JIM CARREWE.

A few days after Dr. Seymour's suicide, Jim Carrewe's engagement to a young college girl is announced. May Seymour decides to leave town. She begs Gloria to go with her. But although Gloria is unhappy with Dick, she refuses to go. But finally she does leave him, and goes back to her parents' home. One day she meets Dick on the street. With him is Miss Briggs.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

GLORIA'S one fear was that she two might see her. Quickly, as if she were fleeing, she ran across the sidewalk and into a drugstore. She sat down at the soda fountain and ordered a chocolate sundae.

When it came, the sight of it made her ill. She paid her check and hurried out into the fresh air and the sunshine.

"Thank goodness, Dick and Miss Briggs were nowhere in sight! I suppose they're having lunch somewhere, together," Gloria thought, with a pang of self-pity. She walked along, not knowing or caring where she was going. . . . Then a poster outside a moving picture theater caught her eye. "Jealous Wives"—the words flashed out on it.

Gloria smiled grimly to herself. "I'm one of them," she thought. "I think I'll go in, and see what it's all about."

She went into the dark, cool cavern of the theater. She sank gratefully into a chair. . . . Ah, it was good to be here, alone! Away from her mother's disappointed eyes, her father's kindliness, from Aunt Dorcas' sharp tongue . . . away from everybody.

There was no sound in the theater except the whirling of a huge electric fan in the center of the ceiling. Down in the orchestra pit, the organist was turning the leaves of his music.

The picture flashed on the screen. Against it Gloria could see the silhouette of a man who sat directly in front of her. . . . Dick!

She leaned over to touch him upon the shoulder. Then caught herself. . . . No, he would have to come to her! She was through begging him to take her back. . . .

But there was a certain cold comfort in the thought that he was not with Miss Briggs, at any rate. She must have merely walked out of the building with him on her way to lunch.

Gloria was glad of that. The thought that Dick could give her up for a plain woman like Susan Briggs had added to her cup of bitterness. Perhaps, after all, he didn't care so very much for her.

Suddenly Dick shifted a little in his seat. Gloria held her breath. Suppose he should turn around and see her there! . . . He would think that she had followed him into the theater.

No, he mustn't think that. She would never give him another chance

"I'm going in," Gloria made up her mind, suddenly to think she wanted him to take her back. . . . She was through! Softly she slipped from her chair, and walked out of the twilight of the theater. . . .

BUT a great loneliness dropped down on her like a cloud, as she went out into the thronged street. How lonely a crowd could make you feel. . . .

Gloria turned away from the center of the town. She walked along familiar streets. She knew where she was going. . . . Home!

Not to her mother's house, but to the little place that had been Dick's and hers! She was going to that forbidden place. . . . the one spot on the whole wide earth where she felt at home.

How cozy and happy the little green and white house looked as Gloria came down the street toward it! It seemed to twinkle a welcome to her with all of its shining windows.

But in the center of the green lawn was a real estate agent's "For Sale" sign. Gloria had a sudden impulse to pull up the sign, as she might have torn a weed out of the lawn. . . .

"Hello, there, lady!" a voice hailed her.

Her neighbor, Mrs. Donberg, was leaning out of one of the second floor windows of the house next door. "I was thinking of calling up the real estate people to ask them to show me through your house," she said in her shrill voice. "But now that you're here you can let me in. I'll be right over!"

Gloria eyed her coldly. "I'm sorry, Mrs. Donberg," she said. "But I haven't any key with me. I just came to pick some of the roses in the back yard. . . . Were you thinking of buying the house?"

"Well, we'd love to have it. It's a little bigger than ours," Mrs. Donberg answered.

Gloria knew perfectly well that she had no thought of buying the house. "She just wants to look through it, to see all my things. . . . The big busy-body!" she told herself angrily, as she walked around to the backyard.

She didn't want Mrs. Donberg poking around her house! She didn't want anyone to look through her house. . . . And the thought that someone would presently buy it and live in it was unbearable to Gloria.

Why, it belonged to her. . . . that house! She had picked out every scrap of wallpaper in it. . . . every stick of furniture! What right had Dick to sell her house. . . . ?

"I'm going in," Gloria made up her mind, suddenly.

ON the grass lay a clothes' pole. Gloria put the sharp iron end of it under one of the sunroom windows. Using it as a lever she finally managed to get the window open.

She laughed aloud when she stood in the sunroom. "No wonder there are so many burglars, if housebreaking is as easy as this!" she thought.

She sat down at the piano and ran her hands lightly along the keys in the opening bars of Offenbach's "Barcarolle."

"No," she thought, springing up. "I'd better not play that thing. . . . It always makes me want to cry. . . ."

She knew that she was on the very edge of tears.

Who would have thought, a year ago, that she could ever have felt this way about a silly old house?

Gloria looked around her. There was Dick's chair. . . . and the reading lamp swung above it. There was the little red smoking-stand she had given him. The tray on it was filled with fine gray ash.

She closed her eyes. She could see him sitting there, with a book in his hands, smoking his old pipe! . . .

Ah, it wasn't the house that Gloria was homesick for, she knew, at last. It was Dick she wanted! Dick!

She dropped into his chair, and laid her head back against the brocade where his head had rested. Tears filled her throat, burned behind her closed eyelids.

"I mustn't cry!" she told herself

"I mustn't let myself feel this way about him! It's going to break my heart, if I do. . . . But the house was alive with Dick. The table where he had made little marks by knocking out his pipe, the writing desk, the magazines piled on one broad arm of his chair spoke of him. . . ."

GLORIA shook herself, and went upstairs. Her feet made no sound upon the steps. She felt dreadfully alone.

On the threshold of Dick's room she paused. His bed was still just as she had left it. . . . made up with clean linen and the best embroidered pillow-cases. He had not slept at home then, at all! He must be living again with Mother and Father Gregory.

Gloria looked into the clothes-dresser. Yes, his clothes were all gone.

The top of his dresser was bare. The drawers were empty. The books had been taken from the little bookcase that stood beside Dick's bed.

But on it stood a large framed photograph of Gloria herself in her wedding dress. So Dick had not cared to take that along with him to his father's house!

"Well, who could blame him?" thought Gloria. "I don't suppose he has very many happy memories of me, after all. . . ."

Now that she stopped to think of it, there had been more storm than sunshine in their life together.

"And the whole thing has been my fault," Gloria told herself sternly. It was the truth. . . . and it hurt.

She turned to look at herself in the glass, as a judge might have looked at a prisoner.

She put herself on trial. . . . She knew she had done none of the things a good wife ought to do for her husband.

She had never taken care of his house. . . . never looked after his comfort. She had told him bluntly that she would never give him a family. Children were too great a bother. . . .

She had not even been utterly faithful to him; hadn't she let Stanley Wayburn make love to her? . . .

AS Gloria stood there before the glass, the telephone rang. It startled her. She had supposed Dick would have had the phone taken out of the house. . . . He must have forgotten it.

"Hello," she said.

"Hello, Gloria," May Seymour answered her. "So you didn't leave home after all?"

"I did," Gloria said. "I just came back here this afternoon for a few minutes. . . . to get some things I had forgotten. I'm staying at my mother's house, you know."

"Wait there for me a few minutes, will you?" May asked. "I'll be right over. I want to talk to you."

"All right," Gloria replied listlessly. "Only hurry. I want to get out of this place. It's spooky."

The truth was that she didn't want to see May. She didn't want her in the house. She wanted to be alone there, for a while. . . . to think things out.

She heard May laugh mirthlessly. "Spooky?" she repeated. "If you think your house is spooky, you ought to spend a night here in mine. It's fairly haunted. . . . Goodbye."

Gloria shuddered as she hung the receiver up on its hook. She wondered how May stayed there in the house where Dr. John had killed himself! . . .

SHE ran downstairs to see if there were any cigarettes in the silver box on Dick's smoking stand. May loved a smoke, occasion only. . . . There were a half dozen cigarettes in the box. Gloria stood looking at them, for a minute. Then she picked them up and threw them into the empty grate.

No, she made up her mind, she would never smoke, again! She was through doing the things that Dick said no nice woman would do!

Even though he should never know it, she would become the kind of wife he had always wanted her to be!

WELL KNOWN RAILROAD MAN VICTIM OF HEART ATTACK

Julius Kruttschnitt of the Southern Pacific is Dead in New York

New York, June 15.—(AP)—Julius Kruttschnitt, former chairman of the board and directing head of the Southern Pacific Railway Company, died today.

Mr. Kruttschnitt died at the Presbyterian Hospital at 3 o'clock this morning. He was taken to the hospital three weeks ago for a minor operation and apparently was recovering when an unexpected heart attack set in, causing his death.

Funeral arrangements had not yet been made, but his former railroad associates said he probably would be buried at New Orleans, his old home. Mr. Kruttschnitt's retirement May 31 last, closed a career covering more than 48 years in a service of America's carriers which culminated in his assuming the supervision of the Southern Pacific as the heir of the Harriman tradition in railroading.

Retired at Age of 70
His ceding of active management was in deference to the road's rule that its executives should give up the reins when they reached the age of three score and ten and was not due to any apparent lessening of its personal qualifications.

The first intimation of impaired health came three weeks ago, when it was learned he had sustained the heart attack which proved fatal early today.

Under the Kruttschnitt directorship the Southern Pacific grew in twelve years from a road of 10,000 miles with annual earnings of $142,000,000 to 16,000 miles and earnings of more than $300,000,000, placing it third in the list of national carriers. He was reputed to be one of a group of half a dozen executives whose annual salaries exceeded $100,000 annually.

Born in New Orleans, July 20, 1854, the future commander-in-chief of the ingtonsh— Umdhhhh lthat Harriman lines, graduated from Washington & Lee University 19 years later with the degree of civil engineer. After five years as a school teacher he entered the service of the Louisiana & Texas Railroad, now a part of the Southern Pacific, as a resident engineer.

Discovered by Harriman
He attracted the attention of E. H. Harriman in 1900 when that railroad Napoleon had obtained control of the Southern Pacific and was drawn into that organization as chief operating officer. In 1904 his jurisdiction was widened to include operation of the Union Pacific and further extensions of Kruttschnitt control were recorded in railroad annals from time to time until the death of the death of the elder Harriman.

In addition to his commanding position in the transportation field, Mr. Kruttschnitt was a director and member of the executive committee of the Western Union Telegraph Company and of the Harriman National Bank and U. S. Mortgage & Trust Co.

During the war he served as a member of the Railroad War Board which assumed the task of attempting the emergency consolidation of all the primary carriers into a unified system for movement of troops and supplies.

Miss Joyce Wethered won her third British ladies' open golf championship this year before 15,000 spectators, the largest gallery that ever saw women battle at golf in England.

Is Today Your Birth Anniversary?

TUESDAY, JUNE 16—If today is your birthday, your mental makeup is similar to the electrical theory which states that "opposite poles attract each other and like poles repel." In other words, you will be attracted by persons whose characteristics are exactly the opposite of yours, and you will dislike those of similar traits. If a brunette, the chances are that you will marry a blond. You like to "kid" and joke with others, and yet you rather resent having others "kid" you. Because of the astral influences, it appears that you will be quite successful in life, but only after very hard work.

Glenna Collett, popular American golf player, carries a 10-cent piece which John D. Rockefeller gave her at Ormond Beach, Fla. She considers the coin a good luck token.

The postmaster general says that the exercise of a little more care and judgment would prevent 21,000,000 poorly addressed letters that contain $3,000,000 in money orders from flooding the dead letter office each year. Putting a little keener edge on the same faculties with reference to physical well being would save the people in Illinois from some 15,000 cases of diphtheria, 5000 or 6000 cases of smallpox and not a few deaths every year. In other words ignorance and carelessness are mighty expensive attributes in any form and when they concern health they steal away the comfort and joy of life to boot.

NOT GUILTY

The magistrate regarded the urchin with a look in which sympathy for his sad plight and disapproval of his misdeed were equally blended.

"My dear boy," he exclaimed, "What ever possessed you to steal the tortoise?"
"I didn't steal it," was the unexpected retort. "It followed me home."—Answers (London).
